Scout has a royal date

A YOUNG Scout leader from Lincolnshire is to be awarded the highest honour in Scouting.

Adam Jacklin (21) from Horncastle will meet the Queen when he is awarded the prestigious Queen's Scout Award this weekend.

The Explorer Scout Leader is one of 500 young people from across Britain who have completed a range of challenges to earn the award this year.

Tasks included serving his local community, completing an expedition in Derbyshire and a five day residential project.

He will travel to Windsor Castle this Sunday to pick up the award.
